Davis played a vital role in his community by teaching in the public-school system for 20 years. He worked two of those years at Singer High School, and the remaining time at South Beauregard High School. Then he and his wife Delores started their own wood-working/arts & crafts distributor business called D's Woodcraft, a dream of hers that he fulfilled by working tirelessly for ten years. He then spent thirteen years working for the United States Postal Service before officially retiring.

Davis is survived by his two children, Jennifer DuBose & husband Mark, and Jason Parker & wife Kimberly; six grandchildren, Katrina Dickens & husband Caleb, Sara DuBose, Ethan Parker, Sean Parker, Taylor Kellogg, and Kade Kellogg; five great-grandchildren, Carter Parker, Caycee James Dickens, Harvey Jack Dickens, Clint Davis Dickens, and Laura Lynne Dickens; and a host of nieces, nephews, family and friends.

He is preceded in death by his parents, Clyde & Shirley Parker; wife Delores Ann Wagnon Parker; and brother Michael Parker.

The family would like to give a special thanks to their father's caregivers: Cassandra Quin-Joyce and Sherry Burgess of Companion Care, Riah Wells of Allegiance Home Health, and Rachel Kaske.
